

Mark E. "Rick" Richardson III

Mr. Richardson is a Vice President and Associate General Counsel at GlaxoSmithKline (GSK), a research-based pharmaceutical company, and has been with the company, or one of its predecessors, since 1991. At GSK, he is responsible for a team of lawyers who manage much of the Company's product liability, commercial, employment and antitrust litigation as well as its government investigations. He is also responsible for overseeing the Company's litigation processes, including its processes for managing e-discovery. Mr. Richardson is also a member of GSK Legal's Diversity and Inclusion Steering Team.

Prior to joining GSK, Mr. Richardson was in private practice, handling a wide variety of complex commercial, product liability, and aviation matters.

Mr. Richardson is a 1986 graduate of the School of Law at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. While there, he also did substantial graduate work at the Terry Sanford Institute of Public Policy at Duke University.
