

Mark Hunyor

Career Coach/Executive Coach

Profile

Mark is a vastly experienced coach who has helped a large number of people to meet challenges in their professional lives. His key areas of expertise are career transition and management/leadership skills. He is known to many ACCA members having presented a course, Management Skills For In-House Counsel, since 2015.

Mark had an extensive professional and corporate career before becoming a coach so his approach is practical and based on a good understanding of modern organizational life. Mark's coaching is also underpinned by strong theoretical foundations having completed a Master degree in Coaching Psychology at the University of Sydney (2013).

Mark started his career in Sydney Australia as a Chartered Accountant. After qualifying as a CA he branched out into commerce and worked for fourteen years with Australian and multinational companies (Dupont, Rinker, Holcim) in a range of specialist and management/leadership roles.

Over the course of his career Mark has had extensive international experience, living and working at various times in the UK, Switzerland and the USA. After years of working in the corporate sector he realised his best days involved coaching people to new levels of performance, self-esteem and satisfaction in their work. This inspired his interest in the psychology of coaching and in 2010 he started formal study at the University of Sydney. He is now a full-time coach and trainer based in Sydney Australia.
