Mike has also represented the staffing industry on a wide range of legal issues and legislative and regulatory matters. He played a key role in passage of the Wisconsin laws that regulate PEOs (professional employer organizations) and was recognized by the industry for his efforts.

To help his clients minimize claims, Mike has designed and delivered a wide range of preventive HR training courses, including anti-harassment courses designed with EEOC involvement and approval. Mike was one of the first individuals selected to deliver sexual harassment training as part of a 1999 conciliation agreement, under which the employer was required to provide EEOC-approved anti-harassment training to more than 100,000 employees.

Mike has partnered with and provided legal counsel to employers of all sizes and industries throughout the U.S., from multinational Fortune 50 companies to startup companies looking to hire their first employee. Mike's clients include employers in the following industries:

Mike also serves as the Wisconsin coordinator and liaison for Littler's Workplace Policy Institute (WPI). Mike focuses on Wisconsin state legislative and regulatory developments in employment and labor law, as well as municipal ordinances and regulation of the workplace. He assists the employer community in understanding and impacting Wisconsin legislation before it becomes law.

Mike was Littler's first attorney in the Madison, Wisconsin office. Prior to joining Littler, Mike was general counsel of an organization that provided temporary staffing, executive recruiting, HR consulting and integrated HR services throughout the U.S. He was also shareholder at another firm that focused exclusively on labor and employment matters on behalf of employers.
