

Speaker Bio – Christine Lam

Christine is currently the Director of Intellectual Property at NetApp Inc. responsible for “all things IP.” She is an experienced legal executive in intellectual property protection, transactions, and litigation. She is also a subject matter expert in patentability, open source licenses, and complex litigation. In addition to extensive expertise in patents, open-source, and cloud computing matters, Christine also specializes in developing patent strategies to protect cloud-related and open source technologies. She often advises on the intersection of three different areas of laws – patents, open source, and standards organization.
