

2023 Rule of Law Report - targeted stakeholder consultation

Fields marked with * are mandatory.

Introduction

The annual Rule of Law Report lies at the centre of the European rule of law mechanism, which acts as a preventive tool, deepening multilateral dialogue and joint awareness of rule of law issues. So far, three editions of the Rule of Law Report have been published in 2020, 2021 and 2022.

In the preparation of the first three editions of the Rule of Law Report, the Commission has relied on a diversity of relevant sources, including from Member States, country visits, and stakeholders' contributions collected through the targeted stakeholder consultation [1]. The information provided has informed the Commission's country-specific assessments in preparing the Report. Building on the positive experience from the first three editions of the Rule of Law Report, the Commission is now inviting stakeholders to provide written contributions for the preparation of the 2023 Rule of Law Report through this targeted consultation.

The contribution to be provided should include (1) information on measures taken to implement the recommendations addressed to the Member State in the 2022 Rule of Law report, as well as developments with regard to the points raised in the respective country chapter and (2) any other significant developments since January 2022 [2] falling under the 'type of information' outlined in the next section.

The input should be short and concise and summarise information related to one or more of the areas referred to in the template. You are invited to focus on the areas that relate to the scope of work and expertise of your organisation. Existing reports, statements, legislation or other documents may be referenced with a link (no need to provide the full text). Stakeholders are encouraged to make references to any contributions already provided in a different context or to Reports and documents already published. Contributions should focus on significant developments both as regards the legal framework and its implementation in practice.

If you wish to submit information concerning several Member States, you will have to fill-in the questionnaire separately for each Member States (due to the size of the questionnaire). There is no limit to the number of contributions submitted by a single participant. In such cases, you are not required to repeat the information in the section "about you" that is non-mandatory nor the information on horizontal developments.

Please provide your contribution by 20 January 2023. Should you have any requests for clarifications or encounter difficulties in filling in the questionnaire, you can contact the Commission at the following email address: rule-of-law-network@ec.europa.eu.

Questions on horizontal developments

In this section, you are invited to provide information on general horizontal developments or trends, both positive and negative, covering all or several Member States. In particular, you could mention issues that are common to several Member States, as well as best practices identified in one Member State that could be replicated. Moreover, you could refer to your activities in the area of the four pillars and sub-topics (an overview of all sub-topics can be found below), and, if you represent a Network of national organisations, to the support you might have provided to one of your national members.

Overview topics for contribution

list_of_topics_2023_Report.pdf

Please provide any relevant information on horizontal developments here

The past two years have seen limited progress in two interrelated issues that support the rule of law in Europe: recognition of the profession of in-house lawyer as equivalent to law firm practice and as a corollary, recognition that Legal Professional Privilege (LPP) is a critical element of a well-functioning justice system. It protects communications between a lawyer and client that are made for the purpose of receiving legal advice. Confidential communications between lawyer and client promote the rule of law by ensuring that clients fully disclose all information to their lawyers, allowing the lawyers to provide the best possible legal advice. It is a tool for more thorough and candid internal investigations, which can improve whistleblower and anticorruption efforts by extending a culture of compliance and respect for the rule of law within companies. This in turn serves to enhance the rule of law across society as companies with good governance raise the standards for their suppliers, partners, and customers. The role of in-house lawyers as promoters of the rule of law can only exist in an environment of trust, supported by the knowledge that communications with the company lawyers will remain confidential. This approach further enhances the rule of law by contributing to the efficiency of the judicial system, relieving burdens on the courts and expeditiously addressing legal matters before they need to reach the courts.

LPP should not be limited to lawyers in law firms. ACC believes strongly that all jurisdictions should recognize that LPP applies to in-house counsel, as it does to their outside law firm counterparts. When in-house counsel have LPP, the benefits to the justice system flow to a broader segment of the population. In-house counsel are experts on the law as well as experts on the organization they serve. No one is in a better position to help organizations make the decisions needed to prosper while complying with applicable laws and regulations.

European countries – including Member Countries – continue to take different approaches, but there appears to be a trend towards recognition of the importance of LPP. Spain, Switzerland and the Netherlands have recently examined the issue and expanded LPP, while France has remained a holdout. Spain and most recently Switzerland, recognize LPP for in-house counsel equivalent to the LPP recognized for law firm lawyers. The Netherlands has adopted a compromise approach by requiring in-house lawyers to complete independence agreements. Altogether eighteen countries in the EU and EFTA (including the UK) recognize some form of LPP for in-house counsel, while fourteen currently do not.

There have been several recent developments in the recognition of LPP for in-house counsel that the Commission should note. For example, in 2021, Spain adopted new bar regulations to clearly state that in-house lawyers have the same LPP protections as those working in law firms. However, in France, legislation that would have created a pilot program allowing for in-house counsel to have LPP was withdrawn in 2021. Most recently, in 2022, the Supreme Court of the Netherlands ruled that in-house counsel are covered under LPP where they are members of the bar and complete an “independence agreement” to signify their independence from their employer-client.

As discussed more specifically in responses to selected questions below, ensuring that LPP protections exist for in-house counsel furthers the rule of law.

The European Commission’s Rule of Law survey to date has not asked Member Countries about the status of in-house counsel and its corollary, LPP for in-house counsel. ACC respectfully requests that the Commission include questions pertaining to these two related issues in its upcoming and future surveys. Specific questions could include the following topics:

- The role of in-house counsel in promoting a culture of compliance within their companies.
- An exploration of how in-house counsel’s status as defenders of the rule of law impacts the administration of justice and the independence of in-house counsel.

- The contribution of in-house counsel to the efficient use of judicial resources by preventing or resolving issues before they reach litigation, thus reducing pressure on the judicial system.
- The need for a unified (or at least consistent) approach to LPP across European jurisdictions (national and EU) to reduce confusion and simplify the application of the rule of law
- Appropriate models to implement a unified approach, such as comparison with the statutorily-protected role of the Data Protection Officer under Article 37 et seq. of the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR).

Questions for contribution

The following four pillars (I.-IV.) are sub-divided into topics (A., B., etc.) and sub-topics (1., 2., 3., etc.). For each of the topics and sub-topics, you are invited to provide (1) information on measures taken to implement the recommendations addressed to the Member States in the 2022 Rule of Law report, as well as developments with regard to the points raised in the respective country chapter of the 2022 Rule of Law Report and (2) any other significant developments since January 2022^[1]. Please include a link to and reference relevant legislation/documents (in the national language and/or where available, in English) if relevant. Significant developments can include challenges, positive developments and best practices, covering both legislative developments or implementation and practices.

If there are developments you consider relevant under each of the four pillars that are not mentioned in the sub-topics, please add them under the section "other - please specify". Only significant developments should be covered.

Information provided in reply to the first question under each pillar, related to the follow-up to the recommendations, does not need to be repeated in subsequent parts of the questionnaire, but can be cross-referenced in the subsequent questions, where relevant. All other questions are not limited to the recommendations, but as in previous years, cover the entire scope of the Report.

[1] Unless already covered in the input for the previous Rule of Law Reports.

3000 character(s) maximum

3000 character(s) maximum

Accountability of judges and prosecutors, including disciplinary regime and bodies and ethical rules, judicial immunity and criminal/civil (where applicable) liability of judges (incl. judicial review)

3000 character(s) maximum

Remuneration/bonuses/rewards for judges and prosecutors, including observed changes (significant and targeted increase or decrease over the past year), transparency on the system and access to the information

3000 character(s) maximum

Independence/autonomy of the prosecution service

3000 character(s) maximum

Independence of the Bar (chamber/association of lawyers) and of lawyers

3000 character(s) maximum

The investigation of independence as an important element of a functioning justice system should be extended to in-house counsel. LPP ensures the independence of lawyers as they advise their clients by maintaining the confidentiality of their communications. As described in the response to Horizontal Developments, significant societal benefits are realized when LPP protects communications between lawyers and clients. When clients feel free to communicate openly with their lawyers, lawyers can provide the best possible advice and improve the resolution of legal conflicts.

Some question the independence of in-house counsel because they are employed by their client. Nonetheless, in-house counsel who are members of a national bar take a solemn oath to promote the rule of law and are subject to disciplinary proceedings by their peers that can include expulsion from the profession. Even in France, where in-house lawyers cannot be members of the bar, they are subject to a professional code of ethics.

The Supreme Court of the Netherlands recently recognized that in-house counsel can indeed be independent in its opinion issued in May 2022 concerning Royal Dutch Shell. The Court held that in-house counsel are entitled to LPP protections when they are members of a national bar and sign an independence agreement with their employer. While ACC does not believe that an independence agreement is necessary, the Court's opinion demonstrates its belief that in-house counsel are independent from their employer-clients, and as such are due the same privilege rights and obligations as their law firm counterparts, whose economic dependence on one important client may be just as significant.

In-house counsel are experts on the law as well as experts on the organization they serve. No one is in a better position to help organizations make the decisions needed to prosper while complying with applicable laws and regulations. A justice system that recognizes the independence of in-house counsel is more robust and complete than one that omits this important element of enforcing the rule of law.

Significant developments capable of affecting the perception that the general public has of the independence of the judiciary

3000 character(s) maximum

Use of assessment tools and standards (e.g. ICT systems for case management, court statistics and their transparency, monitoring, evaluation, surveys among court users or legal professionals)

(Under this topic, you are not required to give statistical information but should provide input on the type of information outlined under section 2)

Length of proceedings

3000 character(s) maximum

Other - please specify

3000 character(s) maximum

Again, ACC requests that the Commission include the important contributions of in-house counsel to the assessment of the Efficiency of the Justice System. Ensuring that in-house counsel's communications are protected by LPP allows organizations to obtain quality legal advice without the added expense of hiring outside counsel. If the motivating reason to hire outside counsel is simply to ensure that LPP attaches to communications, the organization gains little – if any - value for this diversion of resources.

II. Anti-Corruption Framework

Where previous specific reports, published in the framework of the review under the UN Convention against Corruption, of GRECO, and of the OECD address the issues below, please make a reference to the points you wish to bring to the Commission's attention in these documents, indicating any relevant updates, changes or measures introduced that have occurred since these documents were published.

3000 character(s) maximum

Any other relevant measures to prevent corruption in public and private sector

3000 character(s) maximum

In-house counsel provide a first line of defense against corruption in the public and private sector. In-house counsel are experts on the law as well as experts on the organization they serve, and help guide a company to follow the law in order to prevent issues from arising in the first place. Where allegations of corruption arise, in-house counsel are in position to quickly investigate these charges, bring the company into compliance, and work efficiently with government officials to reach an appropriate resolution. As an ACC member recently stated, the primary role of in-house lawyers is preventative, and compliance is boosted by setting up an environment of trust where open, candid discussions between business management and in-house lawyers can occur.
